Hello Ed,

A couple things I wish to comment on in respect to the Corinth Mines.

1. I know that the planned tailings pile might be an ideal location for the project, but I find it odd in respect to historic preservation, that it is located right at the old entrance to the mines.

2. Also, I would hope that all the mine entrances and air shafts/audits would not be totally removed or deleted in the landscape, but be mesh'd sealed so that its historic function & purpose is still evident when the project is completed.

3. There does not seem to be any plans or any existence (that we know) of a sort of a video documentary of the three mines. No mine shaft exploration videos etc. Though the write ups done on the Elizebeth mines are excellent, A video documentary seems a very important addition to that work.

This seems to come up a lot in conversations with locals at historical gatherings.

4. The historical society would like to arrange a historical talk and slide show type of event, carried out possibly by Matt at Milestone Heritage. Is this a program that the EPA would fund?

Matt seems very enthusiastic and is very knowledgeable on the subject. This we feel is important at this point in time for all fok interested in the history of the mines.

That's all for now, Thanks,

Norm Collette
